IDENTITY

Who We Are

We are Troy Mock Trial — a competitive pre-law program built on preparation, precision, and a genuine commitment to excellence, both inside the courtroom and out.

Since 2016, Troy Mock Trial has trained students to think on their feet, argue with evidence, and carry themselves with the kind of poise that actually matters when stakes are high. Every season, we take roughly twenty high schoolers and push them to develop skills that most college students won't encounter until their second year of law school.

Our coaches are practicing attorneys — not just faculty advisors. That distinction shapes everything about how we prepare. We train like we compete, and we compete like it matters.

> "This is not a club. It is a system designed to produce the next generation of legal advocates — one argument at a time."

WHAT MAKES US DIFFERENT

A Program Built for Sustained Success

- Consistent upward trajectory — every season builds on the last, with measurable results and real member development
- Attorney-led coaching — students learn directly from professionals who practice law, not just teach it
- Professional-grade preparation — members leave with skills indistinguishable from those of first-year law students
- ~20 members trained each season in public speaking, legal reasoning, critical thinking, and advocacy
- 100% of members go on to higher education
- Alumni at Yale, UC Davis, USC, UPenn, Georgetown, Pepperdine, and beyond
- Founded by Yale alumna Ashley Fan ('18) — a standard of excellence built into the program's DNA

STRONGEST ACHIEVEMENT

2nd Place — JSerra Catholic Mock Trial Championship

Troy Mock Trial earned 2nd place overall at the JSerra Catholic High School Mock Trial Championship — one of Southern California's most competitive invitational tournaments. Several of the programs in that field were coached by practicing trial attorneys, and our team held its own against every one of them.

What that result tells us — and what we think it should tell you — is that the preparation here is real. Our students aren't going through the motions. They're competing with composure, building arguments on the fly, and performing at a level that would turn heads in any law school clinic.

> This result confirms what we already know: Troy Mock Trial belongs among the elite — and the trajectory points only upward.

OBJECTIVES 2025–26

STUDENT LEADERSHIP

Officers & Responsibilities

CO-PRESIDENT

Rey Elizabeth Del Valle

Oversees the Defense team and keeps the whole operation running — coordinating schedules, managing communications with coaches, and making sure nothing falls through the cracks.

VICE PRESIDENT

Grant Park

Identifies where the team needs to improve and works directly with members to close those gaps. Honest, targeted, and invested in the team performing at full capacity.

SECRETARY

Nima Rezai

Keeps detailed records of meetings and tracks program progress season over season, so development is structured and accountability is built in.

TREASURER

Shri Krishna Sivakumar

Handles financial planning, sponsor contact, and budget management — making sure resources are used responsibly and every member has equal access to the program.

PUBLICITY COMMISSIONER

Ellen Tan

Manages the team's social media presence and documents competitions — building the kind of public profile that makes sponsors visible and keeps the community engaged.

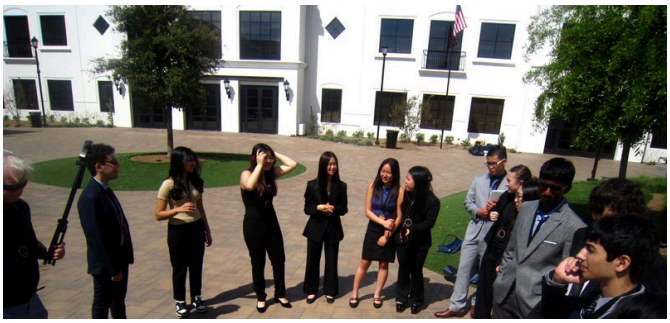

COACHING STAFF

Professional-Grade Guidance

Our three head coaches — Coach Davis, Coach Harold, and Mrs. Cook — bring something rare to a high school program: real, practiced legal expertise combined with a genuine investment in student development.

Coaches Davis and Harold are active attorneys in the legal field. They don't just understand mock trial — they understand what it actually takes to walk into a courtroom and perform. Their feedback is specific, credible, and grounded in professional experience that students can't get anywhere else at this level.

Every practice, scrimmage, and tournament is shaped by their standards. When our students stand up to argue, they've been prepared by people who've done it for real.

> "Our coaches don't just prepare students for competitions — they prepare them for careers."

THE COACHING DIFFERENCE

What It Means to Be Coached by Practicing Attorneys

Most high school mock trial teams are coached by teachers. Some are coached by former law students. Troy Mock Trial is coached by people who walk into courtrooms for a living.

Coaches Davis and Harold are both active attorneys in the Southern California legal community. They bring to every practice the kind of knowledge that only comes from experience: how judges actually think, what makes an objection land, when a witness has broken under pressure, and how to recover when your argument falls apart mid-examination. They've seen all of it — because they've lived it.

For a potential sponsor, this distinction matters in ways that go beyond the trophy case.

Coach Davis

PRACTICING ATTORNEY · HEAD COACH

Coach Davis brings active courtroom experience into every practice session. His feedback isn't theoretical — it reflects how real cases are actually won and lost. Students learn to read a room, pace an argument, and handle the unexpected, because he's watched those moments play out firsthand.

As a head coach, he also serves as an informal bridge to the broader legal community — an asset that directly benefits any firm looking to build relationships with the next generation of legal talent.

Coach Harold

Coach Harold brings the same real-world credibility to the program. His legal background shapes how students approach evidence, examination, and argumentation — not as abstract exercises, but as live skills that have to hold up under pressure.

His presence in the legal field means your firm's sponsorship isn't just seen by students — it's seen by someone who moves through the same professional circles you do. That visibility has real value.

WHY THIS MATTERS TO YOU

Visibility in the Legal Community

When your firm sponsors Troy Mock Trial, your name doesn't just appear on a jersey. It enters a room where two active attorneys — who know people in your field — are paying attention.

Our coaches attend competitions alongside evaluators and judges who are practicing members of the Orange County bar. Your firm's logo travels with the team into those spaces.

That's a different kind of return than most sponsorship opportunities can offer.

WHAT SPONSORSHIP BUYS YOU

- Bar community exposure — your brand seen by coaches and evaluators who are practicing attorneys
- Talent pipeline access — preferred introductions for internships and clerkships
- Authentic relationship — not a one-time donation, but an ongoing partnership
- Alumni recognition — students who remember which firms backed them

THE ASK

A Strategic Investment, Not a Donation.

Troy Mock Trial is seeking sponsorship to fully fund our competitive season — covering travel, registration, lodging, and apparel. Our commitment is simple: no member should ever have to pay out of pocket to be part of this team.

We're not asking you to write a check and move on. We're asking you to be part of what we're building — and to have your name on the work when it pays off.

> "We're not asking for charity. We're offering first access to the most driven pre-law students in Orange County — and the brand equity that comes with backing them early."

THE RETURN

You're Investing in Future Associates.

Our alumni are at Yale, UC Davis, USC, UPenn, Georgetown, and Pepperdine — studying law, competing in collegiate mock trial, and clerking in federal and state courts. When your firm partners with Troy, your name is in the room as these students decide which firms they admire, and which ones they want to work for one day.

BRAND EXPOSURE

- Talent pipeline — preferred introductions for internships and clerkships before competitors
- Campus reach — your brand spreads across Troy's high-achieving student and parent community
- Bar community visibility — coaches and evaluators are practicing attorneys who will see your brand
- Civic credibility — visible investment in legal education and youth leadership
- Logo on team apparel (in development)
- Features on team social media
- Recognition on team website & LinkedIn (in development)
- Named in all press releases
- Certificate of Partnership for firm display
